

International Building Press Regional Journalism Awards 2007

CALL FOR ENTRIES

Now in its third year, the IBP Regional Journalism Awards are taking place again at the Lowry Galleries, Salford Quays, Manchester on Thursday October 25, 2007. The awards have grown in size and stature each year, with increasing support from journalists, sponsors and guests alike.

Launched to recognize and reward outstanding journalism in coverage of a region and its built environment, these awards take in local, national and business press. The Awards are specifically designed to showcase the continued growth, development and regeneration of the property sector in the North West, and entries are welcome from journalists writing across the design, construction and property sectors.

As the regional built environment continues to develop, journalists play an integral role in shaping opinion, leading debate and reporting current affairs to multiple stakeholders. The North West is a vibrant region, well served by journalists who reflect its changing landscape. The standard of entries to date has been very high and we look forward to seeking out new achievements in this arena for 2007.

This year's host is Jim Hancock, former BBC Political Editor in the North West. Jim has been reporting on the political scene in the region for over thirty years and has interviewed every Prime Minister from Harold Wilson to Tony Blair. His work has also included a period as a national political correspondent with the BBC as well as presenting the Politics Show. Jim continues to contribute to political journalism and now writes for several magazines, including Municipal Journal.

I wish all entrants into the 2007 Regional Journalism Awards scheme the very best of luck.

Gerald Bowey Chief Executive, IBP
